Great Books III Syllabus
Fall 2012
Dr. Thompson

Course Learning Outcomes:
The goal of this course is to study great books written during the period ranging from the enlightenment to transcendentalism in order to gain a deeper understanding of their principal western worldviews and to engage in extended analysis of such great ideas as epistemology, truth, reality, the body politic, nature, human rights, deity, morality, and life meaning. In order to achieve these goals, each student will, with respect to each of these great ideas:

• Demonstrate the ability to read and analyze text.
• Demonstrate the ability to actively engage in discussion by framing good interpretive questions and challenging peer statements critically and insightfully.
• Demonstrate the ability to write creatively, comparatively, and analytically.
• Demonstrate the ability to critique peer writing.
• Demonstrate the ability to listen to peer statements during discussion and thoughtfully analyze and respond to their content.

This is a seminar course devoted to close reading and discussion of classical works of Western civilization. This course also gives students extensive practice in critical and thoughtful writing. “The goal of the Great Books program is to instill in the student the habits of mind that characterize a self-reliant thinker, reader, and learner.”1 This singular goal or learning outcome will be achieved by close reading of each text, thoughtful discussion – both in listening and speaking, and by disciplined effort in writing interpretive analyses of the great ideas presented in each work. But, all of this is only possible if you are willing to work hard and learn to think, read, and write in the landscape of the great ideas. Learning is a discipline, whose first step is mastery of your volition.

University Mission:
By reading the great books, you will grow intellectually, emotionally, and spiritually, thus helping to fulfill the university’s mission of gaining preparation for a life of purpose, service, and leadership.

Attendance:
Attendance is mandatory with a measure of grace. You have two free absences, after which your final course grade will be lowered 2% for each absence. Use your two free absences wisely. Absences related to school required events, e.g. athletics, are excused IF advance notice is provided.

Class Participation (10%):
The process of shared inquiry lives on the breath of its participants. Therefore, I expect you to contribute daily to the discussion of the texts at hand. This means coming to class prepared, having read the selections and having recorded questions and thoughts in your reading journal. This class is not a spectator sport, nor is it an audience for a few outspoken voices. I expect you to participate and thereby hone your self-confidence and rhetorical techne.

Extended Writing (3 x 20%)
You are to submit three finished works of writing, each of which is at least 10 pages long, elaborating on an idea of your weekly writing or another topic or question. The first paper should focus on Milton or Descartes. The second paper must draw from at least two authors, not including the author you chose in the first paper. The last paper must draw from three other authors from this course. These papers are due on Oct 5, Nov 9, and Dec 13 – all papers are to be submitted to RAC 121 in person by 5 p.m.
Please submit all written work without your name affixed. Simply write your college wide ID on the back of the last page. This ensures that my grading of your work will be objective and honest.

Weekly Writing (30%):
As scheduled, you are to turn in a clear, concise, hard copy essay of 550–600 words on the assigned topic. These papers will be collected at the beginning of class. You must deliver the paper in person. NO ELECTRONIC SUBMISSIONS. Each writing assignment must include a “Works Cited” section. You will be writing about the reading assignments we are covering.

There are five reasons for this weekly writing schedule:

- Writers write. To become a better writer, you must write and write often.
- Make a point. In order to focus your thinking on a particular book or books, it is not enough to talk. Talk is cheap. Writing represents your earnest attempt to make a point in a finite and fixed space-frame. It means literally putting your ideas on the line.
- Build toward larger papers. Weekly writing provides a means of developing ideas over an extended timeframe and thereby facilitates your writing of major papers.
- Keep up. Deadlines produce results. Your learning experience will be much deeper if you are pushed by this expectation. I push you so that you will push yourself.
- Writing stimulates class participation. Your class involvement will be strengthened by this process.

The weekly writing assignment will usually be given on the Thursday prior to the due date. NO ELECTRONIC SUBMISSIONS. LATE PAPERS COUNT ZERO. No weekly writing due the week of either Oct 1 or Nov 5.

Writing Content: All writing assignments (unless noted otherwise) are to be interpretive in content. Aim for a distinct thesis, a clear argument, and creative thought. Use great books text judiciously and with discrimination. Use third person voice. Be sure to form a definite position that can be defended via the text. Use ONLY texts from the Great Books courses. Each paper should be a product of analytical thought presented in creative form.

ANONYMOUS WRITING:
This is a very important! Please turn in ALL writing assignments WITHOUT affixing your name. Instead, place your college wide identification number on the last page, after the “Works Cited” section. This allows me to be more objective as I critique and grade your papers. All papers are to follow MLA format cast in 12 point, New Times Roman font.

Plagiarism:
May result in an automatic failure in the class. It is plagiarism if you (1) borrow a paper from another student, (2) turn in a paper written by any other person, (3) take material (pages, paragraphs, sentences, or ideas) from any printed source without giving credit. See http://seaver.pepperdine.edu/academicintegrity.

Disability Services:
Any student with a documented disability (physical, learning, or psychological) needing academic accommodations should contact the Disability Services Office (Main Campus, Tyler Campus Center 264, x6500) as early in the semester as possible. All discussions will remain confidential. Please visit http://www.pepperdine.edu/disabilityservices/ for additional information.

Help on writing:
Take advantage of my availability for help on writing your papers. You may submit rough drafts in advance of the due date for any paper. Do this by anonymous e-mail attachment by setting up a generic account with a commercial e-mail provider (gmail, yahoo, ...). We also have an excellent writing center located in CAC 123, x4097. See http://seaver.pepperdine.edu/writingcenter/
